

Abstract

ProQuest Black Studies.

For many years, libraries have used this highly regarded classic as a go-to resource and reference item. The work is valued by readers and library personnel not only for its content but also for serving as a simple and straightforward one-stop shop for all of their statistical needs. To the surprise of the library community, ProQuest published the Abstract after the Census Bureau stopped producing it in 2011. Since then, ProQuest has continued to curate data, release annual volumes, and maintain the format and organization of earlier editions.

There are 30 topical parts, 1,416 data tables, four appendices, and an index in the present version. Of the tables, 33 older ones have been cut, leaving 40 new ones. The writings are accompanied by hundreds of streaming videos (including movies, documentaries, and more) and pictures. ProQuest Black Studies, which is hosted on the vendor's renowned database platform, brings together content that was previously dispersed across many platforms (such as History Vault and Alexander Street) and makes it all cross-searchable and browsable. This is the first ProQuest product to so neatly include archival materials.

EBSCO Industries Inc. SWOT Analysis.

A multinational corporation, EBSCO Industries Inc. (often known as EBSCO Industries or "the company") offers goods and services in the industries of manufacturing, publishing, and real estate. Its key advantages are a brand portfolio in retail products, a global presence, and a variety of products and services. Dependence on public financing and reliance on independent publishers could continue to be reasons for concern. The future of the global media sector is looking up, and the market for smart learning and education is expanding. Budget cuts in academic institutions, reductions by publishers, reductions by libraries, and legislatures could all have an impact the business's performance. The brand portfolio of EBSCO Industries is well-diversified. The business is a pioneer in the manufacture of fishing lures, game feeders, game cameras, tree stands, and game calls. Moultrie, Summit, Code Blue, Knight & Hale, Rebel, BOOYAH, Lindy, Bomber Saltwater Grade, YUM Baits, Little Joe, Cotton Cordell, Creek Chub, Heddon, Bandit Lures, Thill Floats, Silver Thread, Bomber Lures, Smithwick, and Arbogast are some of its most well-known brands. With such a potent brand portfolio, EBSCO Industries is better able to identify itself as the gold standard for quality in the market for hunting and fishing equipment.

Communicating ACM Priorities.

The article includes a communication from the Association for Computing Machinery's (ACM) CEO outlining the organization's aims, including its five-year plan to improve diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI). Additionally, there is a desire to be a part of a professional group whose principles mirror our own. ACM has established a set of guiding principles that guide all of their actions and interactions. These principles include diversity, equity, and inclusion as well as technological excellence, education and advancement, ethical computing, and technology for positive effect.

They concentrate on inclusion, equity, and diversity here (DEI). This fundamental principle drives ACM's five-year objective to further diversify the ACM worldwide community and provide a welcoming environment for all. The fact that this objective is described as continuing to diversify the community shows both their success and the reality that there is still work to be done.

The ACM DEI Council is promoting long-term transformation across the organization. The Council's primary goal will be to increase the representation of diverse groups in all ACM operations. Reviewing ACM procedures and policies to advance fairness and fostering a more welcoming atmosphere for the worldwide ACM community.
